Fund Manager Views

- As the name suggests, the fund focuses on the business cycle over a period and the stocks that could do well in those economic conditions.
- By investing in sectors that tend to perform during various phases – such as consumer staples during a recession or financials and real estate during expansion – these funds seek to optimise returns.
- Accordingly, in the last couple of quarters, the fund has broadened its breath of stocks but broadly retained consumption, investment and export-oriented themes.
- Overall, we have been overweight automobiles and capital goods while being underweight financial services (banks) and FMCG.
- At the current juncture, where markets have been experiencing volatility, we have maintained our large cap exposure and selectively look for opportunities across the market caps.
