India's Growth Story: Driven by Services

The engine of India's growth isn't just what we build – it's what we deliver.

Today, services account for 55% of India's GDP, and are expected to cross 60% by 2047. Whether it's your UPI payment, your doctor on call, your weekend trip, or your binge-worthy show – the services sector is behind it all.

With the rise of digital adoption, urban migration, and a growing middle class, India's service-led economy is transforming how we live – and offering investors a chance to participate in this shift. As per capita GDP increases and crosses the inflection point, services contribution to the GDP of the country also sees an uptick. This movement has been globally observed, quite clearly in the case of China and South Korea, and we see the same opportunity in India as well. The services theme is more than a trend. It's a structural, long-term opportunity.

44%

Of India's exports now come from services – doubling since 2020

41%

Of India's workforce is in services— leading to high salience to real economy

Fund Philosophy

About the Fund

The Axis Services Opportunities Fund, is designed to actively allocate to companies using a bottom-up approach, focusing on scalability opportunities in services sector. The scheme will invest across market capitalization, follow a quality focused style, and maintain high active share.

Fund Manager View

Services is a unique thematic sector with high quality businesses, long term growth underpinned by formalization & technology - structural trends. Additionally, it has a higher correlation with per capita GDP growth and the broad scope of the sector provides diversification benefits.

-Sachin Relekar

In India's fast-growing economy, the services sector's contribution to GDP is expected to rise, similar to trends observed in developed countries. The Indian services sector is well diversified; encompassing diverse themes like digital, exports, financials, tech, capital markets, communication, consumer services, hospitality, healthcare etc. The fund's target is to tap wealth creation opportunities from this versatile segment.
